New CIA Officials Are Sworn In

As President Johnson looked on, the new chief and the number two man in the Central Intelligence Agency took the oath of office in a White House ceremony yesterday. Vice Adm. W. F. Raborn Jr., at center, was sworn in as director of the Agency and Richard M. Helms, second from right, as deputy director by Carson Howell, administrative officer of the White House. Behind the group, from left, are: Mrs. Helms; FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and Paul Nitze, Secretary of the Navy. Raborn succeeds John A. McCone as CIA Director.
